MSHA seeks to hire mine inspectors in New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia Agency holding employment screening in Breezewood, Pa.

ARLINGTON, Va. – The U.S. Department of Labor’s Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) will conduct an employment screening for general and electrical mine inspector jobs in Manchester, N.H., Albany, N.Y., Geneva, N.Y., Warrendale, Pa., Wyomissing, Pa., and Staunton, Va., on April 18 and 19 as part of a nationwide hiring effort. The screening will be held at the Ramada Inn, 16620 Lincoln Highway, in Breezewood, Pa. Registration for walk-in candidates will begin at 7 a.m. EDT and end when testing begins at 8 a.m. EDT.

“MSHA continues to seek out mining professionals who are eager to help keep U.S. mines safe by preventing accidental injuries and fatalities,” said Michael A. Davis, MSHA’s deputy assistant secretary of labor for operations. “We’re intent on hiring the most highly qualified people interested in a career in mine safety.”

MSHA is the federal agency charged with inspection of mining operations nationwide for adherence to regulations designed to protect the safety and health of working miners.

Seating for the employment screening will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. Each applicant must bring photo identification and a complete resume that fully describes work experience, as well as documentation required to support any veteran’s preference claim.

A minimum of one year experience performing onsite safety and health inspections, analysis, monitoring or evaluation work in mining, occupational health or closely related industries is required. All applicants will be notified of test results. Selected candidates will participate in a formal two-year training program. Successful candidates should be able to perform arduous duties and can expect an annual salary range of about $37,000 to $70,000.

In addition to a 40-hour workweek with generous annual, sick and holiday leave, selected candidates are offered health, life and long-term care insurance; a stable retirement program, including a tax-deferred savings plan; travel reimbursement; and flexible spending accounts for medical and dental expenses.
